Big Sanitation Need Is Shown

100 Million U. S. Families Can Use Improvements, Wide Survey Finds.

WASHINGTON. — More than 100 million Americans need improved water supplies and waste disposal facilities, a nationwide survey of sanitation needs indicates.

The United States public health service said that the cost of remedying the condition is estimated at $7,814,581,000.

"This represents," the service said, "a minimum sum that should be spent to reduce the incidence or potential incidence of filth-borne diseases such as dysentery, diarrhea and typhoid fever."

The sanitary engineering division of the health service, in making the survey, found that almost 40 per cent of the needed construction of facilities "is at least at the planning stage."

Conclusions Listed.

Health service officials described the study as "the most complete inventory of basic sanitary needs ever compiled for the nation." Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran said:

"A sanitary environment for everyone is a basic requirement for a national health program. By furnishing data on the volume of construction needs, the survey will guide future action aimed at providing nation - wide protection against filth-borne diseases."

The survey, which consisted of a study of the sanitation facilities of 78 million persons in 5,800 communities, came up with these conclusions:

The nation needs 2.2 billion dollars in water works construction to serve more than 81 million persons in towns and cities.

Sewerage facilities are needed by 85 million persons in communities of over 200 population at a cost of approximately 3.7 billion dollars.

Rural Area.

Another 1.6 billion dollars in construction is needed to provide "decent sanitation for 27 million persons living in rural homes with unsatisfactory water supplies and for 33 million rural residents who lack adequate waste disposal facilities." The report also said that only 12 million persons in rural areas "have reasonably good water."

Cost of needed garbage collection and disposal facilities for the nation is estimated at 166 million dollars.

The health service, in its summary of the report, declared:

"Results indicate that more than two million persons, living in communities of over 200 population, have no community water supply systems and 79 million have systems needing improvements. Nearly 11 million live in communities for which no water supply improvements are scheduled. More than six million persons in towns and cities need new sewerage systems; over 79 million need improved systems; and only about six and a half million are served by adequate systems at present."

U. S. Is Exporting Radios To Europe at Record Rate

WASHINGTON. — Radios, scarce in this country a comparatively short time ago, now are being exported at a record rate. A new high volume of over 60 million dollars for this year is "practically certain," the commerce department said.

The department said that radio exports during the first four months totaled $31,175,055, more than five times as much as in the corresponding months of last year. That is equivalent to an annual rate of $93,568,000 a year, but the department doubted that would be attained.

It said the biggest block to maintaining the current rate is the shrinkage of dollar reserves of many foreign countries.

Winston Churchill Elected to Revolutionary War Society

HARTFORD, CONN. — Winston Churchill, wartime prime minister of Great Britain, was elected to the Connecticut chapter, Society of the Cincinnati. It is an organization of descendants of officers in the American army which fought England in the Revolutionary war.

He was the first Englishman to be made a member of the society.

Churchill is a great-great-grandson of Reuben Murray of Guilford. He said in a letter read at the annual meeting here that he would be happy to accept membership.

Five Wrens Born in Overalls Pocket; Snug as Bug in Rug

STAMFORD, CONN. — A pair of wrens that set up housekeeping in a pocket of Warren Simmons' overalls a month ago, chirped the announcement of the arrival of five little wrens.

All were snug and comfortable in the spacious pocket, protected by a flap which the wrens used as an awning to keep out the rain.

The wrens took possession of the trousers when Mrs. Simmons hung them on the clothesline to dry. Rather than evict the birds, Simmons bought another pair.

Gives Final Tally in Sea War Against Japs

Army-Navy Committee Issues Account of Campaign.

WASHINGTON.—A final tally on the sea war waged against Japan, issued by a joint army-navy assessment committee, showed United States forces accounted for 9,736,068 of the 10,583,755 tons of naval and merchant shipping sent down by attacks of the Allies.

Britain accounted for 138,346 tons; Russia, in the Pacific war for six days, for 9,893 tons representing two naval and two merchant ships.

The score for the branches of United States armed forces gave a heavy accounting for the navy's submarines — 1,314 ships totaling 5,320,094 tons.

Navy and marine aircraft took the next biggest bag, 619 ships of 2,339,597 tons. Army bombers and fighters sank 310 vessels of 701,832 tons.

However, AAF airplanes, especially B-29s, dropped mines which accounted for 589,360 of the total 609,655 tons sent down by that means.

The tabulation of losses inflicted by United States forces also included 112 naval vessels and 11 merchantmen totaling 221,166 sunk by surface craft; 32 vessels of 163,056 tons by army, navy and marine aircraft in combination; two ships of 2,770 tons by navy shore batteries; 58 ships of 280,593 tons by surface craft in combination with other agents, such as surface craft, mines and submarines, and four of 3,305 tons by unknown means.

The report was compiled from enemy documents, intelligence reports and the reports of various services.

'REVEREND'

* * *

Several ministers have requested recently that I try again to clear up the popular confusion as to the proper use of the title Reverend. Says one, "I object heartily to being called 'Reverend' or being addressed as 'Reverend Blank.'"

Let us start at the beginning with this simple fact: Reverend is not an official title like doctor, major, governor. It is simply an adjective of respect like "The Honorable" before the names of members of congress, mayors of cities, et cetera. Moreover, in good usage, there is no such thing as a "Reverend," and no theological or other school awards the degree or title of "Reverend."

Now then, how should Reverend be used in writing to or of, and in speaking to or of a minister?

1. Either of these forms is correct in writing to a clergyman:

The Reverend John Jones
Rev. Mr. (or Dr.) John Jones

2. These salutations are correct: Dear Sir; Dear Mr. (or Dr.) Jones. (Never "Dear Reverend; Dear Rev. Jones.")

3. In speaking to a clergyman, say: Mr. Jones; or, if he holds the degree of Doctor of Divinity, or any other degree of doctor: Dr. Jones. (Never: "Reverend," or "Reverend Jones.")

4. In speaking of a clergyman, say, "Our pastor, Mr. Jones; our minister, Dr. Jones; the Reverend Mr. (or Dr.) John Jones." (Note: Use of Reverend with the surname alone, as "Reverend Jones," is to be avoided at all times in both speaking and writing.)

Use of "Reverend" parallels exactly the use of "Honorable." No one would think of addressing, say, a congressman as "Honorable" or "Honorable Jones."

Nor should any clergyman ever use "Reverend" in referring to himself in speech or writing. His stationery should be headed:

John J. Jones
Pastor, First Blank Church

Or, if he is a Doctor of Divinity:

John J. Jones, D.D.
Pastor, First Blank Church

He should sign his letters: John J. Jones; or: John J. Jones, D.D. (Never: "Pastor John J. Jones, Rev. John J. Jones," or "Dr. John J. Jones.")

Kansas City: How did the expression "kiss of death" originate? —H. E. Z.

Answer: It is an allusion to the kiss of Judas Iscariot: "But Jesus said unto him, Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?" —Luke 22, 48. However, as "kiss of death" is used today, it does not often designate deliberate betrayal; rather, it implies a well-meant endorsement which results in disaster to the career of the one endorsed. For example, certain candidates are said to have received the kiss of death because of their support by the Political Action Committee of the CIO.

Tarsier Looks Like a Living Gargoyle

This goggle-eyed creature is a tiny species of monkey from the Philippines, only four inches long. It is called a tarsier. Suction discs on its fingers enable it to cling to smooth surfaces. It can roll its ears in any direction, among other remarkable abilities. The rare animal was sent to the Washington, D. C., zoo by Charles Wharton, an explorer.
